As to Sund Clay Roads.

Mr. Wilson points out that much accided be done toward improving the record the roads in Eastern Virginia by properly grading and surfacing them with a mixture of sand and clay. The cost of getting rock to that section is heavy, but sand and clay is found there in abundance. Thus far very little work has become of the chief against

CHAPLAIN ALMOST TEMPTED TO USE SOME BAD, UGLY WORDS

Wife Lost Ring in Hotel Dining-Room, and He Bounds Up-Stairs to Sixth Floor to Tell Her That He and Sherlock Found It.

Among the recent guests at the Jefferson Hotel was a navy chaplain and his wife, who came through from Old Point as soon as the testivities of the homecoming were over, en route to their home in the West. Very happy that neither had experienced any bad luck during the year since the fact sailed, they were in the most jubitant humor when a good dinner in the big dining-room had been eaten.

The Joy was short-lived, however, for they had hardly returned to their room on the sixth floor, when the wife, with an unearthly scream, swooned as though she had suddenly been overtaken by the most direful calamity. Though sweyt by surprise, the reverend seaman did not forget the training received on the big man-of-war, and took immediate measures for her restoration.

In a few seconds her eyes opened wildly. In a broken and hysterival voice she told him of the loss from her third finger of a gold band which had been the apple of her eye, being an heirloom handed down from generation to generation of illustrious ancestors. She had just missed it. It might have been in the Chamberlin, on the train, in the street, or—the thought came as a ray of hope—there was a possibility of its having been lost in the Jefferson.
